

Discover Mali's art the calabash village

A well-hidden gem near Ségou is the hamlet, where young and old, men and women, master the art of decorating calabashes.

Wherever there's a shady place in the tiny little village people gather to work and create beautiful pieces of art using simple tools and woodfires.

On Monday's the women are at Ségou's week market to sell the products.

During the rainy season villagers work in the fields. Before setting out to the village, we'll check if work is going on.
