Fulani village hike

The best way to explore a country from a local perspective? Set out on a guided hike in a rural area! The slow pace of travel gives a different kind of experiences and the chance to meet the local people in their everyday environment. Enjoy the scenery and the spontaneous encounters and learn about a different culture.

07am meet-up with your guide at Le Béliér in Natitingou. Have your daypack with water at hand. You are about to set out on a hike through the Natitingou surroundings to visit the Fulani people.

This population group, which is spread over multiple West African countries, still lives a partly nomadic life. The Fulani men are known as the cattle herders. They wander around and depending on the season their families move along. Today's hike takes you to a Fulani village, where you get an impression of life in the village and of the culture of the Fulani people.

After the village visit continue to the Kota falls for a picnic lunch and a relaxing afternoon with possibility to go for a refreshing swim.

Transfer back to Natitingou for a visit to a millet beer brewery. Finish the day with a tasting of banana dough balls and sample different varieties of millet beer.

Around 6pm the day comes to an end, drop-off at Le Béliér or your accommodation in Natitingou.

Meet the Fulani people!
